Leonard Vander Zee: Meeter Center Emo Van Halsema Fellowship Recipient

Dr. Leonard Vander Zee, retired CRC pastor and former editor-in-chief of Faith Alive Christian Resources, was one of our Emo Van Halsema Fellowship recipients for 2018. His research on communion in Reformed churches was the focus of his culminating presentation here, which he delivered at the Meeter Center Lecture Hall on January 8, 2019. "From Gracious Gift to Fearful Decision: The Trajectory of Calvin's Theology and Practice of the Lord's Supper in Dutch Reformed Churches" was well received.

Dr. Vander Zee had this to say about his time at the Meeter Center:

As a retired pastor who is deeply interested in pursuing my theological studies, I was pleased and excited for the opportunity to study at the Meeter Center.

For many years I have studied and written on the Reformed theology of the sacraments, with particular emphasis on John Calvin’s unique and ground-breaking understanding of the Lord’s Supper. A problem that has always intrigued me was that his emphasis on the “real and substantial” gift of Christ in the Eucharist has gradually lost ground in Reformed churches for a more “memorialist” (Zwinglian) view.

From the Director

The Meeter Center is once again looking forward to a busy spring and summer! We will be welcoming one of our largest cohorts of fellowship recipients (see the list on page two), as well as a number of non-stipendiary scholars, from Britain, Japan, the Netherlands, South Korea, Switzerland, and the United States. We always enjoy introducing them to the Center and its rich collections, and learning from them about their research interests. Over its nearly forty-year history, the Meeter Center has welcomed nearly 150 such visiting scholars, and the connections made during their stays continue to bear fruit, whether in terms of publications based on their research or recommendations made to other scholars to make their way to us.

We continue to mark significant anniversary milestones associated with the Reformation. The Swiss Reformer Huldrych Zwingli’s public ministry in Zurich began in January 1519. Therefore, in fall 2019, we will commemorate the 500th anniversary of the start of the Swiss Reformation by hosting a two-day conference at Calvin Theological Seminary on September 13 and 14. Speakers include Bruce Gordon, Amy Burnett, John Roth, Jordan Ballor, and Esther Chung-Kim. The conference is open to all interested scholars, students, and community members, and conference registration will open shortly. Keep an eye on the Meeter Center web page (https://calvin.edu/centers-institutes/meeter-center/swiss-reformation-conference/) for further details. We will also mark the 500th anniversary of Theodore Beza's birth by sponsoring a series of four panels on Beza and his impact at the Sixteenth Century Studies Conference in Saint Louis in October 2019.

Finally, we continue to welcome contributions to the Friends of the Meeter Center and to our endowment fund. Your support enables us to pursue and even expand our activities and services to the field of Reformation studies. As Calvin College moves to become Calvin University in July 2019, the Meeter Center will continue to foster theological and historical discovery, helping students, faculty, scholars, and community members explore, assess, and connect the world of John Calvin and the Reformation to the current day.

THE SWISS REFORMATION AT 500

Think “Reformation”, and the words Martin Luther, Wittenberg, 95 Theses, and 1517 spring to mind. But Luther was not the only Reformer, and Wittenberg was not the only city where the Reformation began. About 360 miles further south, in the Swiss city of Zurich, Huldrych Zwingli began his public ministry in January 1519, preaching sequentially through the Gospel of Matthew. Like Luther, Zwingli started out his career as a Catholic priest. Like Luther, Zwingli had studied the Bible extensively, in Zwingli’s case focusing on Erasmus’s Greek New Testament.

As he worked and preached in Zurich, Zwingli increasingly noticed the divergences between what the Bible said and the practices of the Catholic church of his day. Why did the Church say people had to abstain from meat during Lent? Where in the Bible did it say that clergy had to be celibate? Zwingli’s questions grew as did discussions in the city about the need for a Reformation in church practice and doctrine. By 1523, the Zurich magistrates authorized two major public debates between Zwingli and his colleagues and supporters on the one side, and defenders of traditional Catholicism on the other. The official process of Reformation had begun. By 1523, preachers in Zurich were to base themselves solely on Scripture for their sermons. By 1525, the Catholic Mass had been banned in Zurich’s territory.

To mark the 500th anniversary of the Swiss Reformation, and to highlight its enduring impact, the Meeter Center is hosting a two-day conference on Friday Sept. 13 and Saturday Sept. 14, 2019, at Calvin Theological Seminary. Speakers include Bruce Gordon (Yale), Amy Nelson Burnett (Nebraska-Lincoln), John Roth (Goshen), Jordan Ballor (Acton), and Esther Chung-Kim (Claremont-McKenna). See https://calvin.edu/centers-institutes/meeter-center/swiss-reformation-conference/ for more information and to register. The conference will also feature an exhibit of early printed books related to the Swiss Reformation and a re-enactment of the January 1523 disputation. Don’t miss it!

Did you know that June 24, 2019 is the 500th anniversary of Theodore Beza’s birth? The Meeter Center currently features an exhibit in his honor. Be on the lookout for postings on his life and work on our Twitter and Facebook pages in the coming months.
My research led me to identify two possible reasons for this change:

1. A theological drift in Reformed churches (with my focus on Dutch Reformed) toward a more Zwinglian approach, aided perhaps by the general tendency toward a sharper dualism between the material and spiritual which is inimical to sacramental theology.

2. The emphasis on discipline and testing faith surrounding the Lord’s Supper, which started already with Calvin, tended to take the focus away from the gift of Christ to the faith and piety of the recipient, which is characteristic of Zwingli.

I also made a careful study of the liturgical Form for Holy Communion that was used for centuries in Dutch Reformed churches and went back to their beginning. The study revealed that the Form itself tended to emphasize these two tendencies noted above.

I also became intrigued by the overwhelming attention paid by the Reformed theologians to the relationship of the Lord’s Supper and Christ’s death on the cross. While true, this also tended to overlook the other important emphases within the sacrament on themes such as incarnation, resurrection, and Christ’s ascension bringing humanity to heaven and into fellowship with the Father.

Finally, I intend to develop my study beyond my Fellowship presentation into a theological journal article.

I am very grateful to the Meeter Center and its board for offering me the fellowship, and to Paul and Karin for their unstinting helpfulness in pointing me to the abundant resources available at the Center.
