
A resume is a way to begin a relationship between you and a prospective employer. It is a summary of your skills, experience and qualifications used to demonstrate how you can meet an employer's needs. Contact the Career Center for assistance in perfecting your resume.

Essential Resume Components

Contact Information

Place this information at the top of the resume so employers can easily contact you. Include:

- Full name (as you want to be known professionally, consistent with your name on LinkedIn and other professional documents, in 16-18-point font)
- Address (you can include both current/school and permanent addresses if your address will change in the next year, or you can choose whichever address is more convenient for you to receive mail)
- Phone number (omit home telephone number unless you don't mind if someone other than you receives telephone calls from prospective employers)
- E-mail address (a non-Calvin e-mail address is advisable if you are graduating within the next year; make sure that your e-mail address is professionally appropriate)
- Optional: URL to online profile or website (if the profile/site is up-to-date and well maintained)

Education

Include the following information:

- Name and location (city, state) of school attended
- Degree (written out, not abbreviated; i.e., Bachelor of Arts in Music, not B.A.)
- Major(s) and Minor(s)
- Year of degree completion or expected month and year of graduation if you are currently a student
- GPA if 3.0 or above

Experience

Jobs, internships, class projects and volunteer work can all be included in this section. If you have multiple experiences you wish to list, but some are more closely related than others to the position you are seeking, consider creating two sections: Related Experience and Other Experience.

Entries in each section should appear in reverse chronological order (most recent first).

Each experience should include:

- Your job title/role, name and location (city, state) of organization, and dates (month and year)
- List of skills and accomplishments gained on the job as well as ways you contributed
 - Every bullet point should start with a verb. Use past tense action verbs to describe what you accomplished (e.g., organized, planned, supervised, etc.) or present tense action verbs for current experiences. Vary your choice of verbs rather than using the same word repeatedly. Refer to the "Resume Action Words" handout at www.calvin.edu/career for additional ideas.
 - Use professional sounding words (e.g., "Operated" rather than "Ran" cash register).
 - Focus on skills that are transferable to the job that you are seeking (e.g., if you worked in maintenance, you could write: "Completed tasks independently with minimal supervision," rather than stating the obvious like, "Cleaned floors"). Refer to the "Transferable Skills" handout at www.calvin.edu/career for more examples.

- Describe results that you achieved, not just your duties or responsibilities. Quantify them when appropriate (e.g., “Raised $5,000 in financial support from alumni,” rather than, “Called alumni and asked for donations”).

Optional Resume Components

Objective or Profile

If using an objective or profile, include it at the top of your resume, underneath your contact information and above the Education section. Use few, well-chosen words to state the type of position that you seek and the unique knowledge, experience or skills that you bring to the position. An objective typically specifies the job title or career field you are seeking, while a profile is more descriptive of your background. Whether you use an objective or a profile, be sure to focus on how you will meet an employer’s needs, not how you will benefit from the experience.

- Sample objective: To obtain an internship in the non-profit field where leadership and organizational skills will add value.
- Sample profile: A results-driven and team-oriented business graduate with strong academic and internship performance ready to contribute to a dynamic marketing team. Computer skills include Adobe Photoshop and social media platforms.

Coursework

You may list the names of courses that are related to the type of position you are seeking, especially if seeking an internship. Include coursework as part of the Education section, or as its own section underneath the Education section. However, if space is limited, it is not necessary to list your coursework.

Co-Curricular Activities

Were you involved in student organizations? Leadership roles? Service-learning? Study abroad or off-campus programs? Many employers are impressed by these activities because it indicates enthusiasm and initiative. (Note: participation in off-campus programs can be listed in the Education section if you choose).

Skills

Include computer skills, foreign language abilities or any relevant skills not mentioned in other sections. This is not the place to include “soft skills” or personal attributes like “strong work ethic” or “leader.” A few soft skills can be incorporated into your Objective or Profile statement.

Awards and Honors

This section should not be a repeat of any other section. Include scholarships, Dean’s List or other honors achieved. If you only have one or two items to list, consider putting them in another section (e.g., Education).

References

References should not be included on a resume, unless specifically requested by an employer. Instead, create a separate document (with your name and contact information listed at the top exactly the way you have it on your resume). Ask supervisors or professors for permission to include them as references. Once you obtain permission, list the following for each reference: name, title, organization, e-mail address and phone.

Other Resume Hints

- Every resume should be tailored for each different position (never plan to submit the exact same resume twice). Because many applications are initially reviewed by an electronic application system that searches for key words in the resume, your resume should incorporate language that is specifically mentioned in the description of the job for which you are applying.
- Font should be Times New Roman, Arial or Calibri, size 10-12. Choose one font style and size and use it consistently throughout your resume. Only your name should be larger (16-18 point font).
- Your resume should fit onto a single page (except teachers or later-career professionals). If needed, adjust the page margins and font size to make the page appear “full”.
- Put your most important information in the top 1/3 of your resume.
- Use consistent formatting throughout resume (e.g., put information in the same order in each entry).
- Include keywords that are used in your target industry or are listed on the job description.
- Use short phrases instead of complete sentences; do not use “I” or other personal pronouns and minimize the use of articles like “a,” “an,” or “the”.
- Convert your resume to a PDF when applying online or by e-mail to avoid formatting problems.
- Proofread – spelling, grammar and punctuation must be impeccable, and consistency is key. Stop by our walk-in hours or meet with a career coach for a resume review.
